

LICENSE INFORMATION

A License is required to use Candy Dialogue Engine in a project.

Three Licenses are provided here: the General License, the Free Indie License, and the Studio License.

You must assign either the Free Indie License or the Studio License to your projects, by including the license PDF with your project files when you publish it (the license PDF must be accessible by end-users).

The latest version of a License must always be assigned. Licenses provided here may not be the latest, so please see the Licenses page of our website for the most up-to-date versions.

The Starter Indie License and the Pro Indie License are also available and can be found on the Licenses page as well.

Using the Starter Indie License or the Pro Indie License requires that you purchase a LARC for them (License Assignment Rights Certificate).

A LARC is just a document that gives you the right to use specific licenses in your projects.

You buy a LARC → You can use a License.

For the Free Indie and Studio Licenses, LARC are provided for free (see the 'LARC' folder).

For more information about license tiers and official purchase links, see our website.
